As MBP explained to Cheddar TV, Jack Ma was recently quoted saying: "We cannot manage an airport the way we manage a train station."

If you think about this from a systematic standpoint, the counter-view is that if there is a train and it goes toot toot, it better run on the market's tracks.

The market has to adapt to hosting such a dynamic company. It is so deeply entrenched into the financial system and has a wide range of capabilities. It would be like if Amazon, Apple Pay, Google, Venmo and more all blended together to create a company.
